Why do you wish to study in Canada in the program for which you have been accepted?

Because of Canada's stellar reputation among overseas students seeking top-notch academics, I have chosen it for my higher education. The large number of foreign students who come to Canada every year in search of more education in many fields is clear evidence that students from various nations acknowledge the academic brilliance of Canadian institutions. My employment possibilities in India will significantly improve because I earned my undergraduate degree in Canada. With an extremely low rate of crime, this is a safe and secure nation. In Canada, international students are made to feel incredibly welcome. There is a wide variety of cultures and backgrounds represented in the population. I will have the chance to meet people from all around the world and gain insight into their viewpoints and ideals. Both living costs and tuition fees are considerably less expensive in Canada when compared to the cost of education in other western nations.

How relevant is your program selection with your previous education/experience or why you wish to switch career at this point of time?

My eagerness to learn about the principles of finance and the commercial elements of business drove me to pursue a Bachelor of Commerce degree. After completing my bachelor's degree, I began working as an operations executive, where I was responsible for evaluating and improving organizational processes in order to raise standards of product and service quality while simultaneously reducing operating costs and increasing overall profitability. I became interested in logistics management after working in the company's logistics department. I became interested in a job in logistics and supply chain management because of the pandemic's enormous impact on the industry. I enrolled in Lambton College's graduate certificate in supply chain management because I wanted to learn the skills essential to work in supply chain management. I would learn about operations management, logistics (warehousing and distribution), supply chain technologies, and international transportation and trade as a result of this curriculum.

What is your overall educational goal?

Ultimately, my educational goal is to have a comprehensive understanding of the supply chain's various stages. When I came this programme at Lambton College, I was enthralled with the syllabus as well as the emphasis on hands-on learning. For example, I'd like to learn about demand management, global materials management, global logistics management and international transportation and trade as well as customs management and field integration. I've learned that having a firm grasp of these topics is critical to achieving my professional goals, therefore I have enrolled in this program.

Why are you not pursuing a similar program in your country of residence or of citizenship and What research have you done into studies in your country of residence or of citizenship?

I haven't seen too many countries actually put into practice the cooperative approach to the same extent that they preach about it. Because so many of their universities take such a comprehensive approach to co-op education, Canada is one of the countries whose graduates are considered to have a competitive advantage in the global job market. This is one of the reasons why the country has earned a reputation for being an industry leader. Through internships and other opportunities to gain practical experience in the workplace while they are still in school, institutions in Canada make certain that the students receive training that is superior to what is required.

This quality is frequently overlooked, if not completely disregarded, in many Indian educational institutions. Exams, in which students are expected to achieve outstanding results in order to uphold the reputation of the University, are the primary focus of their attention. Although many nations and universities are motivated by a concept quite similar to this one, they place a lot less emphasis on actually educating the student and then putting their faith in the student's ability to succeed. Because of the Indian educational system's emphasis on rote learning and testing, I lost interest in pursuing these kinds of program because they won't give me the kind of real-world experience I'm searching for.

How will this program enhance your employment opportunities in your country of residence or of citizenship?

Since India and Canada engage in a significant amount of trade with one another, the topic of supply chain relations presents itself as one that is particularly fruitful for me to analyze and evaluate in comparison. Because of this juxtaposition, I will be able to grow my network and make effective use of the resources that are accessible, which will be of tremendous use to me in the long run. Coming from an underdeveloped country, the opportunity to learn the way that business is perceived and understood in a developed country will provide me with a much greater exposure and scope in my home country.

The fact that I hold international credentials gives me an advantage in other ways as well, but the primary advantage is that it allows me to communicate with and manage across the whole network using informed decisions. It is solely for the purpose of gaining experience that I intend to become a member of an organization. Following that, I will launch my own business. Therefore, the networks that I eventually develop as a result of participating in a worldwide forum such as Lambton will indirectly help my brand.

How will you fund your studies ?

I am well aware of the financial obligations that come along with my time spent in Canada, I would like to point out that I have already paid the college 12000 CAD in tuition for my first year and acquired a GIC from CIBC in the amount of $10,000 CAD. As a result of our stable financial situation, my family and I are able to cover the costs of my education while I am away at school in another country. assets worth a total of CAD 600,789, which may be broken down as follows: property, jewelry, deposits, investments, and liquid assets.

What ties do you have to your country of residence or of citizenship ? What are the incentive to return to your home country ?

After completing the program, I will be eligible for a wide variety of employment openings in the supply chain and logistics industry at organizations in India that are run by both the government and non-government organizations. Since the beginning of the epidemic, there has been a significant increase in the number of job openings for supply chain management specialists.

As a result of the fact that my father is a veteran of the military, I have always placed a high emphasis on being patriotic. I spent my whole childhood in India, thus the majority of my friends and relatives still live there. After receiving an education of such high calibre in Canada, I hope to be able to go back to them as soon as I possibly can. I want to be there for my parents, who are getting older slowly, as well as for my grandparents, who require constant care and support. I also want to be there for myself. I am also responsible for the health and well-being of my younger sister, as well as for her education. In addition, my sister and I have inherited a substantial amount of property from our ancestors, which requires us to maintain it. As a result, I will be going back to India in order to be with my family and meet the commitments that I have made to them there.
